New Publications. THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY. - We have received this interesting magazine, for February. The contents are selected with much judgment, and with a nice eye to the proper variety. It opens with "The Battle Hymn of the Republie." which we publish in another col umn. Mr. Trowbridge's poem of Midwinter, is a beautiful composition.

Whittier contributes At Port Royal in 1861, introducing a boat song in negro dialect. Mr. Lowell's Biglow Paper on the surrender of Mason and Slidell, is of rare humor and spirit. The powump. Mr. Trowbridge's poem of Midis of rare humor and spirit. The powerful Story of To-day will be concluded in the March number. Mrs. Stowe's Agnes of Sorrento will be completed in the April number. Theodore Winthrop's sparkling story of Love on Skates is concluded in the present number. The papers of Prof. Agassiz promise to be a leading feature of this Monthly. Mr. Higginson contributes a paper upon Snow, which is a pleasant study of winter day. "Fremont's Hundred Days in Missouri" increases in interest, giving us a spirited account of the daring dash of Zagony's cavalry at Springfield. Paul Aker's paper on Our Artists in Italy; Bayard Taylor's Experiences of A. C., and David Wasson's Ease in Work, together with the Reviews and Literary Notices, com-Agnes of Sorrento will be completed Reviews and Literary Notices, complete the number. is received. It opens with the fifth and last article on the "Coast Rangers," by J. Ross Brown. It is characterized by the same humor that pervaded its predecessors, and abounds in cuts illustrative of the text. It is followed by "The Cavalrist," a spirited plea for the 'eavalry arm of the service, with hints as to its improvement. The articles on making money which have appeared on making money which have appeared in previous numbers are continued in the issue before us, the present one being a description of the operations of the American Bank Note Company. It is profusely and elegantly illustrated and affords much valuable information on the subject of bank note engraving. Anthony Trollope contributes additional chapters of "Orley Farm," as does Thackeray of "The Adventures of Bull." These stories are few widels.

Chairman of the Board of Supervisors, for hauling columns and recess caps for fire proof building. A J Smith, for quarters salary as a County Clerk, ending March 31st, 1861.

B Wells, for services as member of the Board of Supervisors at the January Term, A. D. 1861, and the Board of Supervisors. Phillp." These stories are too widely read to require any more than a pas- H sing notice. "Mistress and Maid" is the title of a household story, by Miss W Mulock the author of "John Halifax, W H Doane, W L Dixon, Gentleman," of which we have the opening chapter in the present number of the magazine. "Washington Irving" and "The Whisky Insurrection" are historical articles, which contain in a small compass much that is of interest. In the way of poetry we have "The Prisoner of War," from Fits James O'Brien, and "The Shipwreek," from R. S. Chilton. Several short the same of the present of
